

Cooperation among several actors in policy implementation

Toshimi Sasaki

Not only the public sector, but also private and other kinds of organizations should cooperate with each other in policy implementation. By doing so, public sector will be able to cut about 40% of the total outcome in social welfare policy, and also guarantee higher quality of services. This is one of the best way among advanced countries for implementing public policies and this article will clarify the advantage of so called “mixed policies” in social welfare.
